Time: 1:00 – 2:00 pm

Location: ONLINE ONLY (NOT LISTED IN CATALOG) - Course Video Link

This course provides a wide-ranging introduction into intersections among classical music, literature, and philosophy, with emphasis on German-speaking cultures. We will study composers from the Baroque period (Vivaldi, Bach, Handel, etc.), the Classical-Romantic period (Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, etc.) and the modern period (Schoenberg, Berg, Webern, etc.). We will also read poetry and narratives by German writers (Hölderlin, Thomas Mann, Rilke, etc.) related to the lives and works of composers. Finally, we will learn how philosophers (Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, Adorno, etc.) have explained the nature, significance, and audience effects of music. Learning more about these fields can deepen our appreciation of the arts, thereby adding joy, a hope for harmony, and uplifting experiences to our lives. Conducted via Zoom, the course will consist of introductory lectures and lively discussions. Short readings and listening materials will be assigned. No prior knowledge of any of the composers, writers, and philosophers is required. The course is addressed to a wide range of listeners with diverse interests. Instructor: Rolf J. Goebel, PhD
